Body Of Negro
Found In Canal

The body of a drowned negro was found in the West Palm Beach canal, opposite the Gieger store at Canal Point, Monday. Peace Justice Lathrop and Constable Francis Cross handled the investigation, and the former decided there was no need of an inquest. The body apparently had been in the water for several days. A Belle Glade undertaker took charge of the body. A social security card found on the body indicated that the dead man might have been Julius Hamberg, of Detroit, Mich., and that he must have been a transient in this section, as none of the negroes could identify him.

Cannon's Aide May
Join U. S. Army

William Sherill, secretary to Congressman Pat Cannon of Washington who holds a commission as first lieutenant in 902nd Infantry of the U. S. Infantry, this week took an examination at West Palm Beach, for a plains commission in the Army. If successful it is likely he will be assigned to regular duty with that outfit, and Congressman Cannon will be losing a capable and popular secretary in his Washington headquarters.

Elements Tough On—

lands a quarantine, so that the lands had to be pulled out of the fields by tractor. Packing prices went up to 20 cents the hundred after the storm.

Many truckers were held up at all the packing plants, awaiting cargoes, but most of those got away on Wednesday with loaded loads.

Hammock and Sims made a record fourth packing from their bean patch on the Palmetto road Tuesday. Pelican lake growers report only nominal loss to their crops. Already many of the farmers are again busy on their land, which will be their last planting of the season.

All celery packing houses at Belle Glade are operating at capacity on fair grade celery. Most of the damage to celery was sustained a month ago, and this loss is showing up in the harvest. Only the best of the present season's crop is being cut, the balance being left in the field. Late celery does not seem to be seriously damaged by the recent flooding. Lettuce did not fare as well as celery, and growers report about a 50% loss on the crop. Celery is still hovering around the $200 a crate price.

Celery and lettuce packers are now almost universally using the Howard crate, which was the invention and patent of Howard Haney, of Belle Glade, and it has had a wide acceptance in all growing centers of the state. The crate is light, strong, carries more vegetables, easy to box and handle in cars and trucks, is about completed, and will be soon used for storage of a reserve of manufactured ice. Blandon Brokerage Company, Canal Point, reports local prices for produce as follows, this week: Black Valentines, $3. to $3.25; Idaho greens, $2. to $2.25; peas $3. to $3.50; peppers, $2.50 up; while potatoes are bringing around $1.50 to $1.75 the packet. Rain did not appear to have done any damage to the potatoes.
